Find Your Program

GW offers approximately 140 undergraduate programs and 330 graduate programs through its 10 colleges and schools.

Which program is right for you?

The information in this Provisional version of the University Bulletin is generally accurate as of June 11, 2025. This Bulletin will continue to be editing for approximately one month until the final version is published.

The University reserves the right to change courses, programs, fees, and the academic calendar, or to make other changes deemed necessary or desirable, giving advance notice of change when possible. Additional information regarding reservation of rights can be found under University Regulations (<https://bulletin.gwu.edu/university-regulations/>) in this Bulletin.

The Bulletin is the University's contract with the student. As such, it is the single official set of degree requirements, regulations, and rules applicable to a student matriculating in a given academic year, from their first semester of enrollment until all degree requirements have been fulfilled. After the first year, a student's Bulletin is archived (<https://bulletin.gwu.edu/archives/>) on the current Bulletin website for their reference.
